Trying to Understand Love

Love can be thought of as a Force of Nature. When the force takes hold then, both the greeting and the parting salutations become “May the Force be with you.” This is usually signalled silently with a hug and/or a kiss. The laws that govern this force are both simple and complicated both at the same time. This might be thought of as something akin to quantum mechanics, both on and off at the same time. These laws of Love govern both women and men equally. This force arises out of the interaction between two higher intellect organisms with sufficient knowledge of their own existence as sentient beings.

Coupling Love

1. Coupling is a specific concept that brings two people together as one. Their thoughts and movements become intertwined.
2. Emotional gratification is derived from the force of coupling love.
3. Coupling love is only the foundation for a relationship.
4. The nitty-gritties of living together comprise the rest of the relationship.
5. Love can predict a coupling.
6. Love cannot ensure the survival of the coupling.
7. For the force of love to be attractive, there must be a reciprocation.
8. The love force interacts with itself, (its reciprocating part).
9. Lust and love are two different things.
10. Without the reciprocating part, love is not a force but rather an emotion that is experienced.
11. Without the reciprocating part, and thus the force, love cannot ensure a coupling.

Half Love The Dynamics of Half Love

12. If one partner has love but the other does not have the reciprocating part then coupling cannot occur. Cohabitation can occur, but not coupling. This we call the state of Half Love.
13. An individual can deny their reciprocating part and effectively hide it. This leads to a breakdown of the force.
14. Half love is insufficient to ensure emotional gratification in either partner.
15. If one person does not have the reciprocating part of love then the other person cannot give it to them.
16. There is no amount of discussion or logic or coercion, that can bring about love.
17. 'Like' does not equate to love, 'liking a lot' does not equate to love, 'liking a whole lot' does not equate to love.
18. Cohabitation can occur before love.
19. Half love can, mute into coupling love.
20. Coupling love can be killed.
21. The killers of coupling love can be minor seeming incidental things or happenings.
22. One major killer of love is one person's desire to remain cool, calm and collected. This rule takes a bit of thinking to understand clearly. The dynamics of evolution defer to the strong. As such, one person may elect to be pursued. Without that pursuit, love can be negated.
23. The difference in age of two people can automatically erect barriers to love simply by the difference in how one lives due to age.
24. Once love is killed, it can be resurrected but, this is exceedingly difficult to do.

“Can half love be felt for two different people at the same time?” Good question.
