Clarification for beginners with computers:

I have set my computer to automatically download and open pdf files. [My virus scanner checks them first.] Your computer may leave the downloaded file in your download folder without opening it. To open the pdf you would have to open your Download folder and search for the document then click on it. Everyone's computer, and internet web browsers, are different so, you need to know how your computer and browsers are set up. For instance, I use Firebox as a browser because it does not track where I visit on the web, and I use DuckDuckGo as a search engine again, because it does not track where I go. This browse and search structure cuts down on junk and unwanted advertising. There are more web skills to learn in that regard but we will leave it at that for now.
